No. 6. This is a machine got up on an entirely new principle, different from anything ever before offered to the public, and we conditently assert that for family use it has not an equal. It is very light and tasty, runs very rapidly, is almost noiseless in its operation, and use a srainger Negote. It is so arranged as to be utterly impossible for it to miss atterns. It has a tension on both sides, and carries a targe supply of thread on the under spool. The motions are gained by two small craims that run without percoptible noise. The two threads are worked in such a manar as never to pull both at the same time, and consequently, little liable to break.

They were particularly pleased with the performance of a little girl (Miss Rue, we believe,) in a diaticular disparagement to professional lady We correct some of the figures : "stars" when we say that her part was enacted nearly as well as we have seen similar performances on our boards. She evinced a surpris sing knowledge of the proprieties of language, tone and gesture, and entered into the spirit of Rich Lawns (werranted fast colors) worth 20 the plot. We thus particularly note the performance of this little girl, because she deserves special mention in a general notice of the entertainment.

Miss Cora B. Carter, who presided at the pi ano with very respectable skill, is a vocalist of decided talent. She did not sing quite loud enough, however; this we attribute to her embarrassment, as her tones certainly evinced some trepidation. She gave sufficient evidence despite this; that she could sing, and well.

The programme was, we think, rather to exten ded, which made the exhibition rather too hurriedly gone through with. But laken altogether, the Exhibition of the Colored School last evening was highly creditable to all concerned.
